... reflections

in the cold refrigerator of my mind, you opened my door and set the temperature a little less cool, and the frozen jello of my mind began to melt a bit, you hopped from mustard to ketchup, finally deciding to relish beside the pickles, but somewhere you fell, or perhaps slipped, off the butter and landed in a white of the cottage cheese only to drown in so much cream.

... and the game must go on.

they say that all true stories end in death. well then, this is a true story; but this death does not concern a person. this is a set and an idea. but before one enters the idea of death, one must understand the birth ...

the first day of set construction was utter chaos. now all of us were new at this and our set chairman was two hours late. have you ever looked at an empty stage with boards, canvas, and frames leaning up against the walls? well, it looked rather dismal.

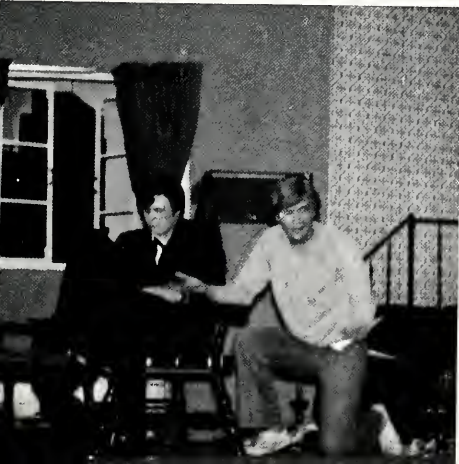

we were averaging about two walls a night, enjoying ourselves, and not really getting much done. the disaster — we had the whole back wall two inches off Mr. Reed's tape marks. after that major disaster, we got the basic set up. soon we started getting the cute frilly things like carpet, door frames, tiffany lights, railings, and all that other hob-gob.

rehearsal — glorious, stupendous rehearsal. in reality, tired, worn out, but still fighting and enjoying it — rehearsal. the lost pickle incident was a prime example of the idiots we made of ourselves. at one part in the play, oscar was to throw a pickle to vinnie. in the break between acts, we lost the pickle. so in total darkness, seven people were crawling around on the floor looking for a three-inch pickle when from somewhere off stage, we heard, "felix has the pickle."

when friday and saturday came, the set had to live up to what was said about it. we had great actors and crews, and a beautiful set. we all loved and respected each other and worked together. i, as i'm sure all the crews did also, had a great sense of pride being connected with the show.

but of the set? well, the set had served its purpose and had to be stricken the next monday. yet in all our memories will live the superb experiences of putting it up, watching it serve its purpose, and gallantly and respectfully, die.

candlelight, the sheraton room, "just you-n-me" created an atmosphere for whistling goblets, laughter, and dancing. blue flowers and a warm spring evening as 118 honored woodlanites and their guests joined with linn stoller to enjoy an evening in ruffles, lace and tuxes. dinner was served. entertainment presented by dick stoner, in which mr. reed and mr. mull displayed talents of growing sponges out of their hands, and tying up magicians. the night then was set for dancing, and the royal court was announced. while onalee gerig and gary remeschneider reigned, pictures were taken and after proms began. the flowers wilted. the dressed stored and tuxes returned, but the memory of "you-n-me" will last as long as there are spring evenings and candlelight.

the simple operations of adding, multiplying, subtracting and dividing became complex when used to compute areas and perimeters of trapezoids and analyze parabolas and ellipses in algebra and geometry classes.

while the junior high mathematicians prepared and studied for their future mathematical years, they explored the fundamentals of algebra and geometry.

phase elective english offered a broad new horizon to both teachers and students. as each nine weeks came to an end, the course selections were changed from such things as the study of death to weirdos in literature to relevant issues. each individual explored the depths of his desired areas and grew more knowledgeable in his line of study.

for those girls in home economics, the future was no obstacle. they planned their weddings, furnished their homes, and prepared for their domestic duties of cooking and sewing. from these experiences they discovered some of the everyday fallacies such as burnt meals and the high cost of foods and furnishings, then they advanced towards the future responsibilities of a wife, a mother and most of all, a modern woman think terminology

communications is of great importance during one's lifetime and school was no exception. from jujitsu to spotters to type and file, this to dissection of the respiratory system, we communicated and understood.

after the seniors learned of governmental regulations and laws, the last half of the year was spent in economics gaining knowledge of taxes, business cycles and teaching in panels.

social problems via speakers, field trips and scrapbooks in combination with class lectures and discussions were the activities of sociology class.

students gathered together in one room to understand the whole surface of the earth. that was a big job to cover in a space 20 by 30 feet, but those in world history accomplished their goal.

through the comparisons made in geography between people and places in the u.s., a better understanding of our problems, and theirs, were gained.

the junior high history students had a very full year in which they dedicated their time to take a look way back in the history of the world and mankind. they discovered various behavioral habits throughout the eons of time and explored the many languages and heritage contained in the world. overall they studied for the future from mistakes of the past.

in the "good old days," students walked to school. but now, with the help of 19 bus drivers, we rode to school.

janitors fought
beyond the line of "dirty"

when we trudged home from school we seldom thought of the diligent men, armed with brooms, vacuum cleaners, and mops, who fought the battle against slush and debris.

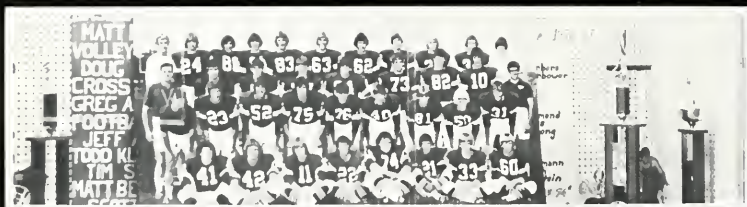

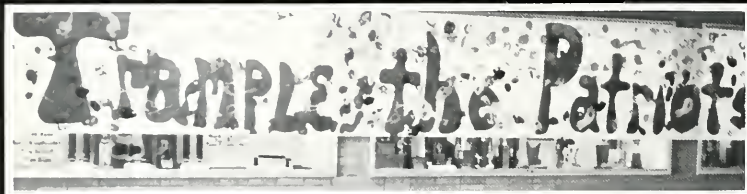

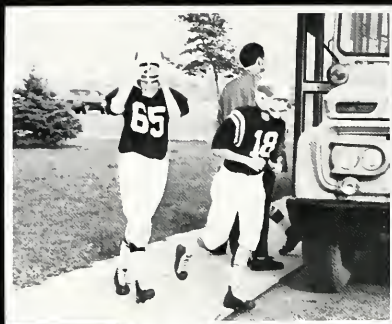

soup to nuts served with a smile.

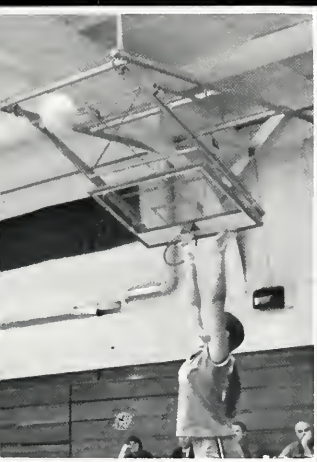

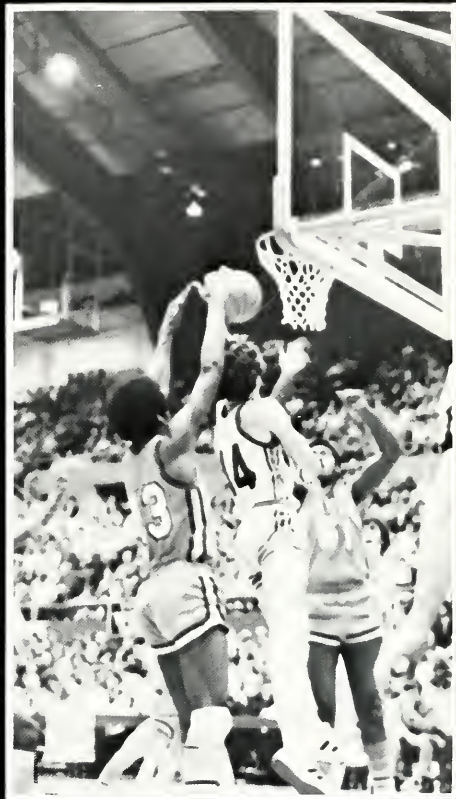

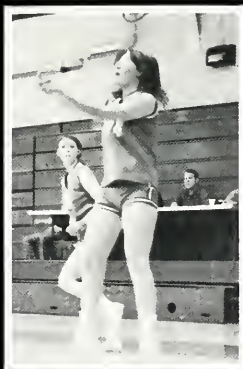

every day students escaped the class rooms and journeyed toward the lunch room. there they faced the white clothed ladies across the counter who served them their lunches, a variety of food from tacos & pizza to chicken & potatoes. some days, seeing a smiling face behind the food was better than any gourmet masterpiece. but on other days, the masterpiece only helped make the smiles a little wider.

baseball, cross country, golf, track, all a part of the wide world of sports, and woodlan.

... and they were princes

we didn't know what the guys intended to prove at the beginning of the year, but we all agreed they certainly went far beyond our expectations. we cheered and laughed all through the no-loss season. before, the big thing was acac, but this year woodlan began to look past the fence and jumped into a state game. on the fan bus everyone went completely out of their minds. after the first half, the score was simply too much and we knew we didn't have a chance; but we didn't mind because it was a state game — a state semifinal! now, i feel sorry for next year's team, they must keep up a school tradition — a tradition that keeps us winning.

"this is a dictatorship, not a democracy
 . . . and i am king." what keeps a group of sweating, freezing, hurting, smelly, bloody, elated, tremendously smart and yet pathetically dumb athletes going?
 yeah, i mean smart to memorize plays, formations, codes, calls rules, and teams;
 and i do mean memorize. if you don't know, and it showed you didn't know, especially in a game, baby, you really feel bad. but, if you do something good like intercept a pass, force a fumble, or get a long run, you couldn't get any higher on any drug! but at times you feel grossly stupid for getting into the whole mess. elation lasts only a few seconds, pain lasts

the student council was one of woodlan's most active organizations. they organized a successful new homecoming, a fair chance clothing drive, honor day, and worked on many other ideas and problems to help the student body. organizing major projects and adding little activities was a small part of what the student council did to make '74 at woodlan the year it was.

national honor society — chosen on qualities of character, scholarship, leadership, and service. 16 new members were added in '74.

a group of seniors learning to deal with problems encountered in becoming involved with college. letters, rejection slips, acceptance letters, scholarships applications, all these and other problems were dealt with in college prep.

the future teachers had a busy year, and between students teaching class, delivering apples to teachers, they even had some fun!

ffa is a national youth organization in the area of agriculture stressing leadership and responsibilities. these goals were accomplished by various activities as judging teams and leadership contests. the chapter was awarded for its accomplishments for ranking in the top 1% of the nation.

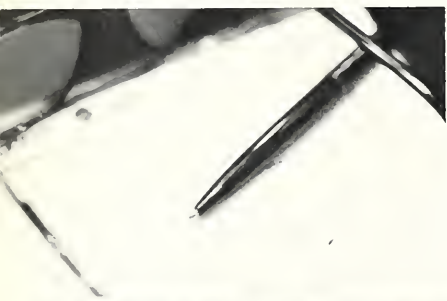

these guys not only worked but also played at the casting contest, skeet shoot, sadie hawkins dance, and they were awarded by collecting many memories.

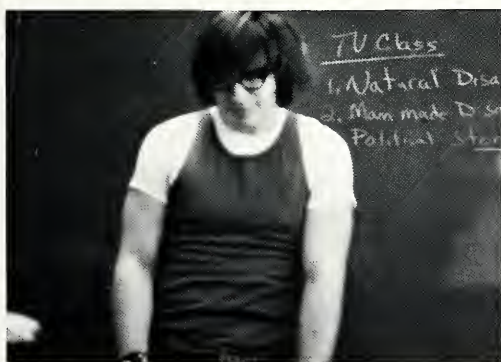

future homemakers of america — learning and preparing for the future. both chapters had a full year which started with the freshmen having paper plates on their heads and carrying dolls in milk cartons. other scheduled activities included christmas caroling at the town house, st. anne's, and the state meeting. learning, preparing and just having fun, that's fha.

the speech team was extremely active this year, attending meets, winning many ribbons and a 1st place trophy, staying up all night at purdue, herding cows, getting lost, enjoying it all.

the drama club, affiliated with the international thespian society, was the backbone of much work for the year's dramatic productions. a joint banquet with the speech club wrote fini to a fine season.

we blended together

fifteen minds worked searching for new ideas. three hundred individual fingerprints were placed on the photographs. our "orange monster" was broken. we were confronted by the student council.

we shared our facilities with the pow wow staff — what a confused mess! the senior and junior high members of the yearbook staff blended together to recapture the 1973-74 school year.

the hours put into practicing paid off when the swing choir won their trophy at the bluffton street fair.

noon periods spent with 49 other members who waited to join the mixed chorus. a season lightened by concerts and contests, that was the girls' glee.

crammed for time, the sophisticated robe wearers of the concert choir sang from "hallelujah chorus" to "dry bones".

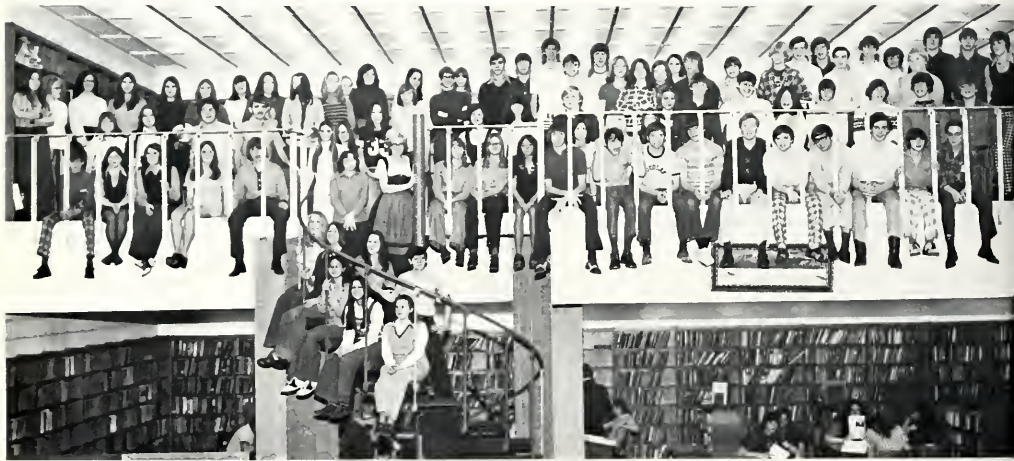

the first place trophy ever brought back by the junior high was in 1974.

bridge club members learned from their mistakes and enjoyed the first year of the club's existence.

a trip to frankenmuth, michigan, dinner at heidelberg, and the annual dance were some of the activities the members of the german club shared.

art club members knowledge, creativity, and techniques were displayed and enjoyed during the art sales.

competition, spirit, fun, these were the factors behind the hi-y club. this year's activities included a paper drive, their annual banquet, and playing in their basketball league.

the sportsman club explored a hunter's and fisherman's life as they went to canada, had a casting contest and skeet shoot.

"peace on you" and "two fingers for them" are remembered as a.r.i.d., s.t.r.o.h.s., p.e.a.c.e., p.o.w.e.r., and u.f.o. parties battled for position in the annual mock elections. les lengacher (arid) won police commissioner; alan sears (arid) major; scott foss (arid) judge; teachers' representative tim sipe (power); sen. rep. bill hatzigeorgiou (strohs); jun. rep. jeff nelson (peace); soph. rep. marcia kees (strohs); and frosh rep. trudy knapp (strohs).

who are we? what has molded us into the persons we are? we grew in a world of hippies, yuppies and beatniks, which brought permissiveness, pornography and sensuality, as our generation continued to discover who we are.

as we stood at the threshold, looking through the door to the future, which is limited only by ourselves, we were not to measure futures by time alone, for we all remember our fellow classmate, Jane Litzenberg, her future was brief but filled with much happiness, warmth and love for god and her fellowman.

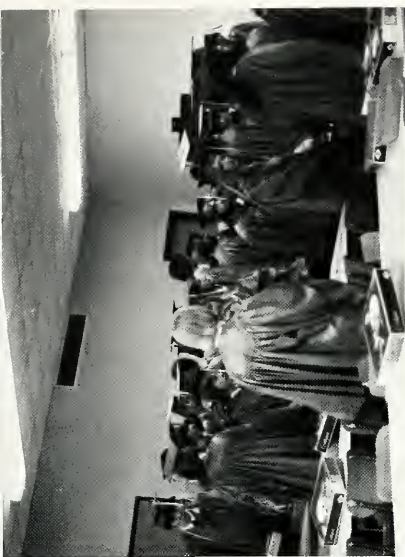

beth stieglitz, salutatorian

happiness is a gift that was meant to be shared with one another at all times, not to be bottled up until the next holiday or party comes around. it is a goal in life and the courage to reach out to that goal.

after reverend gerald ringenberg gave the baccalaureate address and dr. john young spoke, the seniors were presented to the parents and world by mr. lee and received their diplomas from mr. thomas kurtz and mr. keith mendenhall, as the 122 members of the class of 1974 walked together for the last time as a whole, they were congratulated by their families and friends, behind them was woodlan high school and many memories.

i guess we've always been compared to the upperclassmen because we did what they had to do a few years ago — but we did not do as well. being in junior high is being compared.

there are three substantial halls which connect the senior and junior high, but sometimes they might as well be deep moats filled with pirannahs and alligators. the senior highers were secluded in their own little world, and we tried to escape ours to get to theirs. well, i didn't, and don't, believe either of these assumptions.

i was where my age put me

we junior highs did enjoy the pep sessions even though we "took up space." the dances were nice even when we didn't know what we were doing. i enjoy being where i am, but i also enjoy being considered enough a part of woodlan that i was able to have a part in the play, the musical, and other activities. i was where my age put me, and had to stay within the boundaries of my place, but may i ask just where that put me?

so many things go into being a part of woodlan. you have to become a separate person, a personality all unto yourself. cast yourself in another's role, do what you never thought you'd be able to do. push yourself to reach your goals, and it'll reach you.
